To the Memory of my Parents,
This Book is lovingly inscribed.

For in our CAUSE, let none forget,
Were Right and Truth conjointly met;
The hallow'd luster of our Creed
Is heighten'd as the Ages speed.
—C. E. J., 1899.

"By the heavy guns at Pensacola, Mobile, and New Orleans,—behind the parapets of Pulaski, McAllister, and Sumter,—among the volcanic throes of Battery Wagner,—at Ocean Pond and Honey Hill,—upon the murderous slopes of Malvern Hill,—behind the lethal shadows of the Seven Pines,—in the trenches around Petersburg,—amid the smoke and carnage of Manassas, Fredericksburg, Spottsylvania, Chancellorsville, Sharpsburg, Gettysburg, Brandy Station, Cold Harbor, the Wilderness, Corinth, Shiloh, Vicksburg, Perryville, Murfreesboro, Missionary Ridge, Chickamauga, Franklin, Nashville, Atlanta, Jonesboro, Bentonville, and until the last thunders of war were hushed at Appomattox and Greensboro when, in the language of the present gallant chief magistrate of this commonwealth (Gen. John B. Gordon,—1886-1890), our regiments, brigades, divisions, and army corps were 'worn to a frazzle,' these brave Georgians were found shoulder to shoulder with heroic companions in arms, maintaining the honor of their State, and supporting the flag of their beleaguered country. You can mention no decisive battle delivered, no memorable shock of arms during the protracted and herculean effort to achieve the independence of the South, where Georgia troops were not present. Their life blood incarnadined, their valor glorified, and their bones sanctified the soil above which the Red Cross, which they had followed so closely, waved long and fearlessly in the face of desperate odds. All honor to the courageous men who fell in the forefront of battle. All honor to the cause which enlisted such sympathy, and evoked such proofs of marvelous devotion. Precious for all time should be the patriotic, heroic, and virtuous legacy bequeathed by the men and the aspirations of that generation. Within the whole range of defensive wars you will search in vain for surer pledges and higher illustrations of love of country, of self-denial, of patient endurance, of unwavering confidence, and of exalted action."

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT.

Georgia was one of the original thirteen States, but was settled later than the others. The patent for it was granted to Oglethorpe, and other Trustees, June 9, 1732. The first colony, consisting of 120 persons, came in 1733; the objects of the colony being to establish a barrier between the Spaniards and Indians, on the south, and South Carolina and North Carolina on the north, and to provide a refuge for the honest-minded needy and destitute; especially, poor debtors, orphans, and friendless children and youth—the last-mentioned object being that of Whitefield.

The colony was at first military, and the colonists received their lands on condition of military service. This occasioned discontent, and many of them moved to North Carolina. The policy was changed, and 50 acres of land was offered, unconditionally, to all settlers; and many Scotch and German emigrants came in.

In the war between Great Britain and Spain in 1739-43, Oglethorpe attacked the Spaniards in Florida in 1740, but the expedition was a failure. The Spaniards attacked Georgia in 1742, but, becoming alarmed at Oglethorpe's stratagems, they returned to Florida. After the peace, Georgia demanded the slaves which had been prohibited to them, and in 1752 the trustees surrendered the colony to the crown and negro slavery was permitted.

While Georgia was not suffering as were the other colonies from British oppression, she made common cause with them in the Revolutionary War.

By the conclusion of a treaty of peace with the Creek and Cherokee Indians in 1791, the Creeks in 1802 ceded to the United States a large section of country in the southwestern section, and Georgia, in turn, relinquished to the United States all her claims west of the Chattahoochee, which surrender includes the present States of Alabama and Mississippi.

In 1860 this commonwealth followed the lead of South Carolina, and passed an Act of Secession, January 19, 1861.

Georgia repealed the Act of Secession, October 30, 1865, and adopted a new constitution, ratifying the Thirteenth Amendment; but congress, not satisfied with the constitution, put the State under military rule and another constitutional convention was called, which formed the constitution ratified in 1868. The State was restored to the Union on its ratification of the Fourteenth Amendment; but, on its refusal to ratify the Fifteenth Amendment, was again put under military rule.

On compliance, however, with this demand, it was re-admitted.

Joseph E. Brown was governor of the State from 1857 to 1865, and James Johnson provisional governor a part of 1865.

Alexander H. Stephens, of Georgia, was vice-president of the Confederate States.

Robert Toombs, of Georgia, became the first secretary of state of the Confederate States, February 21, 1861. He was afterwards a brigadier-general in the Confederate army.

SKETCH OF HISTORY OF GEORGIA. (1732-1909.)

Georgia was founded by James Edward Oglethorpe in 1733, the charter establishing it having received the Royal sanction June 9th of the previous year. The point selected for the first settlement was Yamacraw Bluff, on the right bank of the Savannah River. It was called Savannah after the stream which flowed by it; and the primal landing of the emigrants at their future home occurred on February 1, 1733. Tomo-Chi-Chi, Mico of the Yamacraws, who lived there, was a warm friend of Oglethorpe; and, from the first, he assisted him materially in the work of colonization.

One of the earliest acts of the founder, after the arrival of his colonists, was to define the outlines of his proposed Savannah. Through the industry of all concerned, the requisite clearing rapidly progressed, houses gradually supplanting tents, and soon the straggling settlement began to wear the aspect of a fully-fledged village. Early in the following year, Oglethorpe conscious of the dangers to which the English were exposed from their Spanish neighbors, and wishing to ascertain the possibilities of internal defense, projected a tour to the southern confines of the province. The trip was fruitful of good results, as the site of historic Frederica on St. Simon's Island, was then chosen. Almost coincidently with this visit, accessions were made to the little colony through the advent of the Salzburgers, the Moravians and the Highlanders. The last-named were valuable citizens from the start, and were always ready to take up arms for their beloved Georgia.

In the fall of 1735 the town of Augusta, on the Savannah River, was founded. It was, in its incipiency, and, for many years afterwards, a Trading-Post, and much business was transacted there. Its situation was an advantageous one. About this time, Oglethorpe made a trip to England and secured the needed reinforcements for Frederica. He was always thinking of the Spanish storm which was liable, sooner or later, to break upon his settlement. On his return he brought with him Charles Delamotte, a school teacher, and the brothers, John and Charles Wesley, to Savannah. Delamotte opened the first school for white children in the colony. John Wesley had the honor of introducing the pioneer Sunday-school into Georgia, and perhaps also the world. He was a remarkable divine.

In May, 1738, Oglethorpe was appointed general and commander-in-chief of His Majesty's forces in Georgia and South Carolina. As such he was instructed to inquire particularly into the designs, preparations and movements of the Spaniards in Florida. While his mind was intent upon these matters, he was apprised that the Red Men were soon to hold an important convocation at Coweta Town. This was to occur in July of the following year, and he realized how indispensable it was that he should attend. And so, with a few companions, he made the hazardous march of three hundred miles through the trackless wilderness, and appeared at the gathering. His admirable conduct appealed most strongly to the assembled braves, who discovered in him a worthy, fashioned in accordance with their highest ideals. About the same time, news was brought that the first overt act of Spanish aggression had been committed, and that English blood had been shed on Georgia soil. Accordingly, General Oglethorpe, in retaliation for this outrage, determined to lead a military expedition against St. Augustine. The expedition, however, through non-concert of action on the part of some of the troops, was destined to disappointment.

This was in the spring of 1740; and, two years later, in revenge for the attempted invasion of Florida, the Spaniards sent a monster Armada consisting of fifty-six sail, and conveying perhaps six thousand men, to sweep Georgia from the map. It was a case of history repeating itself. The undaunted resistance they met with everywhere, was but a grim foretaste of the humiliating Waterloo they were soon to encounter. In front of Frederica and indomitable Saint Simon's Island, the second Spanish Armada was baffled just as the first had been overwhelmed in the British Channel. Seldom was a defeat more crushing, or a victory more complete.

In July, 1743, General Oglethorpe bade a sorrowful and fatherly adieu to Georgia and set sail for England, never again to return. For a decade, or more, the colony was then subject to the rule of presidents. In 1754 it became a province of the Crown, and was placed under the domination of Royal Governors. There were three of these: Captain John Reynolds and Henry Ellis, Esq., being the first two. The third and perhaps the greatest of the gubernatorial trio was James Wright, Esq. (afterwards Sir James Wright) who, entering office in October, 1760, for two decades and more had a notably eventful administration. While he was a locum tenens, the Revolution began, and Governor Wright was responsible for preventing the colony from declaring itself until all of her other American sisters had spoken. True to his convictions, and at all times faithful to his beloved Sovereign, he was pre-eminently a courageous executive; and when the patriotic tempest did break upon his devoted head, it was beyond his power to control it.

In January, 1776, the Second Provincial Congress was triumphantly convoked at Savannah. An important feature of its work was the choice of five delegates for the Philadelphia conclave. Three of these deserve special mention as they had the honor of signing the Declaration of Independence. They were Button Gwinnett, Lyman Hall and George Walton. Now that Georgia had unqualifiedly placed herself in the Revolutionist column, the "Liberty Boys" were zealous in doing everything possible to put her in military condition. To this end, they gave their constant attention to raising and equipping companies and procuring supplies of arms and ammunition. In the latter connection they made valuable captures. Part of the gunpowder taken in one expedition, as tradition has it, was used at the Battle of Bunker's Hill. To cap the climax and show their utter contempt for the King, these undaunted Americans made his accredited representative, Governor Wright, a prisoner in his own home. The first noteworthy Revolutionary affair on Georgia soil occurred late in December, 1778. Savannah, then, fell into the hands of the British. This loss was a disastrous one, and, nine months later, an attempt was made by the combined French and American armies to retake the town. A desperate but fruitless assault was made in October, 1779, which resulted in much carnage. In the same year occurred the famous victory of Kettle Creek. It was a partisan triumph; as was also the siege of Augusta in the summer of 1781. A twelve-month later, Savannah was, without a struggle, surrendered to General Anthony Wayne by the English, and the war was over so far as Georgia was concerned.

After the restoration of peace, the work of rehabilitation occupied some time. The founding of the State University was one of the first useful things attempted. This was in 1783. Five years later, Georgia was admitted into the Union. January 2, 1788, was the exact date. About that time the Yazoo agitation began. It enlisted public attention until the famous overthrow of the accursed fraud in February, 1796. Early in the following century (1802), the commonwealth effected a sale to the General Government of her immense western territorial possessions. The consideration involved was one million, two hundred and fifty thousand dollars; and thus was a death-blow forever dealt to the Yazoo transaction.

The next exciting episode was the second war with England. That was in 1812-15. Only slight skirmishes occurred within the confines of the State. Then came Governor Troup's administration, and his historic clashes with Federal authorities; and, soon after, the removal to the West of the Creek and Cherokee Indians. Railroad building was now the problem of the hour; the succeeding decades showing great activity in that department. In the midst of all this internal development, news was brought of the opening of Mexican hostilities. Enthusiasm was widespread. Companies were formed and equipped, and, for months, everyone was thinking of those who had been sent to the front. Many Georgians won distinction in that conflict, It was the training-school for that larger struggle, soon to be introduced.

Everything now hastened to a finale. The next three terms must be passed over, and then we will come to the administration of Joseph E. Brown. It was, in many respects, a remarkable one. Commencing in 1857, during the eight years of its continuance, it was crowded with exciting events. Governor Brown was distinctively a self-made statesman. His indomitable will-power was the keynote of his success. He may have made mistakes, but he showed himself a man at all times.

For several years prior to the war between the sections, there were many premonitions of the approaching catastrophe. The rumblings of slave agitation were heard throughout the country—in congress and elsewhere. They delivered to the South a message which she could not ignore. Her States Rights doctrines, her private interests and everything she held sacred, were at stake, and she was forced to declare herself. This she did through her Secession Ordinances. In them she claimed the prerogative of withdrawing from the Union whenever she so desired. The first Southern State to take action in that important regard was South Carolina. This was in December, 1860. About a month later, or on the 16th of January, 1861, the famous Georgia convention was assembled. Its deliberations were destined to be fraught with mighty consequences. The contending forces in the gathering were almost equally matched; the secessionists slightly preponderating. But the Unionists made up in brilliant advocates, what they lacked in numbers, and, for three days and more, there was a death-grapple between the opposing contingents. The secessionists, too, had impassioned oratorical supporters, among whom was the gallant Thomas R. R. Cobb. He fell in battle, a brigadier-general, and an early sacrifice to the cause of Confederate liberty. It was his lot to make the pivotal speech of the convention. As a result of his burning appeal, it was decided on January 19, 1861, by a vote of two hundred and eight to eighty-nine, to adopt the Georgia Secession Ordinance.

From now on, war was the all-engrossing question. No stone unturned, the united effort was to develop the full military potentialities of the commonwealth. Young and old, from the first, contributed their patriotic mead. Georgia has every reason to feel proud of her courageous sons. The Augusta Powder Works was a monument to one of them (Col. (Gen.) George W Rains). He has the distinction of having erected and successfully operated this gigantic plant. First and last, nearly three million pounds of gunpowder were manufactured within its imposing confines. It was indeed a bulwark of the beleaguered Confederacy.

The first noteworthy passage at arms on Georgia soil occurred in the spring of 1863. This was General Forrest's pursuit of Col. Streight's daring cavalry raid. The pursuit was a successful one, and resulted in a complete victory for General Forrest. Streight's entire command was captured. A few months later, the great battle of Chickamauga was fought. It lasted two days and was a most bloody and formidable engagement. Catoosa County, near the Tennessee border, was its scene. One hundred and thirty thousand men, all told, participated in the lethal struggle; the casualties amounting to nearly a fourth of that number. Generals Braxton Bragg and Rosecrans were the opposing generals.

May 4th, 1864, was the historic date when the great Dalton-Atlanta campaign was commenced. It was a tactical encounter. General Joseph E. Johnston with fifty thousand troops was in constant collision with General Sherman's splendidly equipped and numerically powerful army. It was another instance, in a way, of the Hammer and Rapier policy. General Johnston was continually falling back, exchanging one position for another, but fighting always. It was a masterly retreat which cost Sherman many of his men. His antagonist suffered far less. The sanguinary battle of Kennesaw Mountain was the principal one along the line of march. Three weeks later, General Johnston was summarily supplanted by General John B. Hood. The wisdom of the change may be questioned. General Hood was not the tactician his predecessor was, and Sherman apparently realized it at once. The former believed in aggressive warfare. A series of engagements around Atlanta soon followed. Though gallantly contested, they did not yield the wished-for fruits. Within a few weeks, Atlanta fell into the hands of the enemy.

Atlanta being captured, General Sherman decided to make his celebrated "March to the Sea." The movement was commenced about the middle of November, 1864. His army consisting, we are told, of sixty-five thousand veteran campaigners, met with little opposition to its triumphal progress. In fact, as Georgia was practically defenseless, only slight skirmishes, at best, were possible. The Federals were at liberty to devastate ad libitum. They are said to have cut a swath of sixty miles in width through the heart of the State. When Savannah was reached, the city was surrendered to Sherman without a struggle. It had been fortified with a view to standing a protracted siege. The next affairs within the borders of the commonwealth were those at West Point and Columbus, April 16, 1865. Desperate but ineffectual resistance was offered at both places. General R. C. Tyler held the Confederate fort at West Point. These were, it is said, the last battles of the war, east of the Mississippi River. The final melancholy happening was the capture of President Davis near Irwinville, in southern Georgia. This occurred May 10, 1865; and the conflict, so vigorously prosecuted against overwhelming odds, was ended.

The rest of the story is soon told. Governor Brown resigned his post June 29, 1865. He had officiated as such for almost four terms. Hon. James Johnson—a presidential appointee,—was installed as his successor. As provisional governor of Georgia, he continued to act for several months. Hon. Charles J. Jenkins superseded him as executive in December, 1865. On the summary removal of the former (Jenkins) in January, 1868, Brigadier-General Thomas H. Ruger, U. S. A., became Chief Magistrate in his stead. He is remembered as the military governor of Georgia, and during his incumbency, Atlanta became the State Capital. On the inauguration of Rufus B. Bullock, six months later, his short-lived reign terminated. Ruger's displacement, however, did not bring the relief for which the people craved. Bullock riveted on Georgia more securely than ever, the chains of reconstructed reconstruction. He did not want the State to be re-admitted. The truth is, compliance with the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the Federal Constitution was the test for re-admission into the Union. Bullock did not recognize the commonwealth's eligibility for that honor. But Ulysses S. Grant, president of the United States, thought differently. On the 15th of July, 1870, he signed a Congressional Bill, which declared that Georgia, having fulfilled all requirements, was adjudged as legally entitled to re-admission into the Union.

In October, 1871, Governor Bullock, through resignation, brought his inglorious administration to an end. Thereupon, Benjamin Conley became his successor. A twelve month later, Democracy was definitely reinstated through the election of James M. Smith. His tenure was followed by that of General Alfred H. Colquitt, admiringly referred to as the Christian Chief Magistrate. Then came the short but able term of Alexander H. Stephens. On his death in the spring of 1883, James S. Boynton assumed the gubernatorial reins. He was not, however, permitted to retain them, as Henry D. McDaniel was soon saluted as Georgia's ruler. In 1886 General John B. Gordon was proudly installed as governor. His administration was an eminently satisfactory one. About twelve years later, when W Y. Atkinson was the incumbent, the Spanish-American War began. The sensation which it created was slight and short-lived. During all this time, the commonwealth prospered, and there was a healthy development along all lines. In 1907 Hoke Smith was inaugurated. His tenure, which, in the judgment of many, has been forceful and capable, is nearing its close. He will soon be superseded by Joseph M. Brown, the son of Georgia's famous War Governor. When Mr. Brown becomes the executive, he will have the honor of presiding over a pivotal Southern State, with a population approximating two million, eight hundred and fifty thousand souls, and a great and splendid future.

GOVERNORS OF GEORGIA.

It is interesting to remember that Hon. Howell Cobb, of Georgia, afterward major-general, P. A. C. S., was the president of this memorable Confederate Provisional Congress. He was, as we understand, an admirable presiding officer, and worthily represented his native State. He was one of the notable members of his delegation.

CONFEDERATE CABINET OFFICERS, APPOINTED FROM GEORGIA.

HON. ROBERT TOOMBS, of Georgia, served as the first Secretary of State of Confederate Government from February 21 to July 21, 1861. HON. WM. M. BROWNE, of Georgia, afterwards Colonel A. D. C., on military staff of President Davis, and subsequently promoted to grade of Brigadier-General, C. S. A., served as Assistant Secretary of State of Confederacy during his administration.

HON. ALEXANDER H. STEPHENS, of Georgia, served as the first and only Vice-President of the Confederate States. As such, he was an ex-officio member of the Confederate Cabinet. He was also, in his Vice-Presidential capacity, President of the Confederate Senate. He served as Vice-President from February 18, 1861, until the downfall of the Confederate Government. He was arrested, by order of the Federal authorities, May 11, 1865.

HON. PHILIP CLAYTON, of Georgia, served as Assistant Secretary of the Confederate Treasury during the greater part of the Confederate War (1861-5) (see Life and Times of C. G. Memminger, first Secretary of the Confederate Treasury, by Henry D. Capers). It is interesting to remember that HON. HENRY D. CAPERS, of Georgia, was appointed and commissioned as Chief Clerk and Disbursing Officer of Treasury Department, C. S. A., February 19, 1861. He served as such for some months (as the records seem to show), becoming, later, Major and Lieutenant-Colonel of Twelfth Georgia Artillery Battalion. He has (I believe) the unique credit of being the oldest commissioned Cabinet Officer of the Confederate Government. HON. BOLLING BAKER, of Georgia, became the First Auditor of the Confederate Treasury. He served, apparently, during the life of the Confederate Government. HON. A. H. (J. A.?) CRAWFORD, of Georgia, was appointed Chief of Bureau of Warrants, Treasury Department, C. S. A., February 22, 1861.

GEN. ALEXANDER R. LAWTON, of Georgia, was the second Quartermaster-General of the Confederacy, he serving from August 10, 1863, until the close of the War. He was connected with Confederate Department of War, as was also Gen. Isaac M. St. John, of Georgiaa, who was appointed second commissary-general of the Confederacy, Feb. 16, 1865. He served as such, as the records seem to show, until the end of the War.

HON. G. E. W NELSON, of Georgia, was given the position of Superintendent of Public Printing, C. S. A. He was identified with the Department of Justice.

HON. BENJAMIN H. HILL, of Georgia, was, during the life of the Confederacy, the confidential adviser of President Davis, and of the Confederate Cabinet, on all State questions.

ROLL OF HONOR.

GENERAL ORDERS NO. 131.

ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, Va., October 3, 1863.

Difficulties in procuring the medals and badges of distinction having delayed their presentation by the President, as authorized by the act of Congress approved October 13, 1862, to the officers, non-commissioned officers and privates of the armies of the Confederate States conspicuous for courage and good conduct on the field of battle, to avoid postponing the grateful recognition of their valor until it can be made in the enduring form provided by that Act, it is ordered:

I. That the names of all those who have been, or may hereafter be, reported as worthy of this distinction be inscribed on a roll of honor, to be preserved in the office of the Adjutant and Inspector General for reference in all future time, for those who have deserved well of their country, as having best displayed their courage and devotion on the field of battle.

II. That the Roll of Honor, as far as now made up, be appended to this Order and read at the head of every regiment in the service of the Confederate States at the first dress-parade after its receipt and be published in at least one newspaper in each State.

III. The attention of the officers in charge is directed to General Orders No. 93, Section 27, of the services of 1862, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, for mode of selecting the non-commissioned officers and privates entitled to this distinction and its execution is enjoined.

BY ORDER.

S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General.

"THE WAR OF THE REBELLION.

OFFICIAL RECORDS OF THE UNION AND CONFEDERATE ARMIES.

Series 1st, Vol. XXI, pp. 578 and 582.

Operations in Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania.

No. 271.

Report of Major-General Lafayette McLaws, C. S. Army, commanding McLaws' Division:

Headquarters Division, Camp near Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 30, 1862:

My aide-de-camp, Captain H. L. P. King, was killed on Marye's Hill, pierced with five balls, while conveying an order to Brigadier-General Cobb. He was a brave and accomplished officer and gentleman, and had already distinguished himself during the operations in front of Fredericksburg, as he had done in all the other engagements when on duty."

NOTE.—The following members of the Georgia Hussars—a Savannah command—which constituted Company F of the Jeff Davis Mississippi Legion, are mentioned on the Roll of Honor, as published by General Samuel Cooper, Adjutant and Inspector-General, C. S. A., Richmond, Va., December 10, 1864, in connection with the Battle of Upperville, Va., June 21, 1863, and miscellaneous engagements: Captain David Waldhauer, 2d Lieutenant W. W. Gordon, 2d Lieutenant J. McL. Turner, Sergeant L. H. Clemens, Sergeant M. G. Prendergast, and Privates G. N. Saussy, William Lake, F. Bird, C. H. Mann, William Frew and J. (T.?) H. Lake.
